

Reading Question for October 13

This question covers page 12 of a book by René Descartes called Meditations on First Philosophy. The answer does not have to be turned in. You will probably have to do the reading more than once to get the answers.

1. On page 12 Descartes describes the project he will be undertaking, namely to “demolish everything completely and start again right from the foundations.” Why does he want to engage in this project? Is this a worthwhile project?