

Class Notes from 9/6/16

1. Without equal autonomy between people unequal influence of power will be present.
2. In order to have an ideal friendship, there cannot be any unequal influence of power.
—
3. Friendships without equal autonomy will not be ideal.

1. Without equality and sufficient independence, two people cannot have a true friendship.
2. Parents and their adult children lack equality.
3. Parents and their adult children lack sufficient independence.
—
4. True friendships between a parent and their adult children are impossible.

1. People, including people that aren't morally virtuous, can compartmentalize their moral virtues.
2. Compartmentalizing moral virtues is a matter of having some moral virtues and lacking others.
3. So long as you have some moral virtues, you can have a close personal relationship.
—
- C. Not just morally virtuous people can maintain close personal relationships.