

Paperling 3 We Constructed in Class

1. Licensing would only provide a new protection from people willfully mistreating children if it either it stopped people who were planning on willfully mistreating children but hadn't yet, or it provided a new protection against those who we had already caught willfully mistreating children.
2. If you ask the people who haven't yet willfully mistreated children if they're planning on it, they're going to to say "no"
3. If people who haven't yet willfully mistreated children will so "no" if asked if they're planning on willfully mistreating children, then licensing won't stop people who were planning on willfully mistreating children but haven't yet.
—
4. Licensing won't stop people who are planning on willfully mistreating children.
5. We already have a system in place for dealing with people we've caught willfully mistreating children.
6. If we already have a system in place for dealing with people we've caught willfully mistreating children, then licensing won't provide any new protection for people we've caught willfully mistreating children.
—
7. Licensing won't provide any new protection for people we've caught willfully mistreating children.
—
8. Licensing won't provide new protection from people willfully mistreating children.