

Paperling 1 we constructed in class

Kupfer thinks that an ideal parent-child relationship cannot also be a genuine friendship, at least if the parent-child relationship is one from our society. He sometimes mentions peer-to-peer friendships, and maybe thinks a genuine friendship is a peer-to-peer one, but it's not fully clear. Also, he thinks that parents and children can have some kind of good relationship.